

sonic.net an independent isp is 10 times better than aol - they are very helpful, are reasonably priced for dsl and speak American English. Why should the big guy always win when they give such poor service?